Addressing Ageism in Healthcare

Changing the Narrative | Ending Ageism Together

Ageism is a risk factor impacting social, emotional, and physical health. It can shorten life spans and increase social isolation. Ageism shows up in systems, societal beliefs, and policies. Historically, older people have been excluded from clinical trials and ageism was prevalent during the pandemic. Learn how to recognize ageism in healthcare and the workplace and what actionable steps you can take to end it.

Dementia Care: There IS a Better Way

Dementia Together is leading cultural change in Northern Colorado by introducing the SPECAL® Method*, a UK-originated, evidence-based dementia care model. SPECAL® is understandable by anyone and applicable for family care partners, senior care workers, healthcare professionals, and community members. SPECAL® provides the “what, why, and how” to practically and positively manage the disability of dementia in ways that promote lifelong dignity and well-being for people experiencing it.

Neuroscience of Stress

Stress. We all have it, and we know we don't like it, but do you really know the affect it is having on your brain and body? How does it affect your relationships, career, family and your mood? Learn how neuroplasticity can transform your life, help you through stress, find new energy and a sense of peace, and become the best you possible. Identify different brain states that hijack your ability to move forward, and gain powerful tools to reverse that process. Experience daily exercises to take this transformational practice into your everyday life.
